FURTHER NEWS FROM MAUNA LOA.

The latest news from the Great Lava Flow of 1887 is to hand per steamer W. G. Hall, which vessel arrived just before our time of going to press, allowing time only for a brief summary which is given below—

The Lava Flow at the source is still active, but diminishing rapidly. On Wednesday night nothing but the reflection could be seen from Punaluu. Yesterday morning, while the Hall was passing the Flow, nothing was to be seen but one or two small jets of smoke rising here and there.

Large volumes of smoke are rising from various parts of Mauna Loa, and the belief is that lava will burst out before long.

The special advertisement inserted in the columns of the DAILY BULLETIN yesterday, by Mr. Goldberg, on the subject, "Mourning" in general and "Silk Hats" in particular, gave rise to an unprecedented run on the latter fashionable head coverings. ### HE TOOK IT IN WATER.

Captain— took one of his sailors, who was complaining of being "out of shape," to Dr. McKibbin for medical treatment the other day. The doctor gave the patient a bottle of nasty-tasting physic—all physic is nasty-tasting—with instructions to take "one spoonful three times a day, in water." Jack being anxious to get well, endeavored to obey the instructions to the letter. But after the first dose went back to the doctor, and complained that the medicine was so nauseous that he could not swallow it, declaring that he had taken one spoonful, which stuck in his throat and made him almost cough his head off. But you should take it in water, said the doctor, and that will destroy the bad taste. So I did, said Jack, I got overboard, and took it in water right up to my neck, and almost caught my death of cold in doing it.

NEW FACTS ABOUT CANNIBALS.

It has long been known that a few tribes of cannibals lived in Africa, but there was until recently no reason to believe that the tribes of anthropophagi are numerous and that cannibalism is practiced in quite a large part of the Continent. The new discovery is the result of explorations in the Congo Basin, where it is now believed cannibals are more numerous than in any other part of the world. There is some striking difference with regard to this practice among various tribes.

When Lieutenants Kund and Tappenebeck were traveling between the Wambu and Kulu rivers they came among the gentle and timid tribe of the Pamballas, who confessed that they were men-eaters on a small scale. "It is true," they said, "that we eat people when we have any people to eat, but that is not very often." This announcement has a tinge of sadness due to the fact that the Pamballas, not being warlike, are generally the underdogs in the fight that surrounding tribes force upon them, and they think themselves lucky if now and then an enemy falls into their hands.

Quite different was the conduct of the men-eaters whom the same travelers met further east. "Why," they insolently shouted, "do you not give us some of your men to eat? You are no friends of ours. When the Majaccas come among us they never fail to bring us some men to eat. They are our friends."

Other cannibals in the Congo Basin deny that they are men-eaters, and will not admit their status as long as they can conceal it. Few of the Bangallias will talk on the subject to white men. The practice in their tribes is usually confined to their chiefs and leaders, they being considered as specially privileged.

It is impossible as yet to say what causes confirm some tribes in the practice of cannibalism, while near related tribes abhor the very idea. The Monbutus on the Welle Makua, who are exceptionally advanced in their arts and industries, are cannibals. The Wagandas, on the other hand, who live about 400 miles southeast and who are of the same stock as the Monbutus and like them in their development, wouldn't dream of eating a human body, notwithstanding the fact that they are very fond of meat, which is the greatest luxury the common people can have, as they are confined almost wholly to a vegetable diet. —[N. Y. Sun.

SIX THOUSAND COATS.

A curious story comes from London. Not many days since a man appeared at the Bank of England, perusing under the weight of a heavy bag which he threw on the counter and asked to have changed in gold. The bag contained exactly £100 worth of fourpenny bits of the year 1838—all of the 6,000 as bright and unworn as when freshly issued from the Mint. The owner explained that the coins were a legacy from his grandmother, who had just died, and who, having a passion for fourpenny pieces, had procured the bagful at the bank half a century ago and hoarded them carefully until the day of her death. The legatee took his £100 in gold and departed. Next morning he reappeared in a very excited state of mind and asked for the fourpenny bits back, "for," said he, "I am told the jewellers will give a shilling apiece for them." He was politely informed that the coins had been "distributed." —[S. F. Bulletin.

DECREASE OF THE MERCHANT MARINE.

The decrease of merchant marine of the world in 1886 as compared with 1885, in sailing vessels, is, according to the Bureau Veritas of France, 1,164 vessels and 205,881 tons. The increase in steam vessels is 155 and in tonnage 184,455. The decrease is seen to be notable in carrying capacity. The United States afford their full proportion of the decline, while Great Britain but little more than holds her own, and this she does not in number of vessels, but in tonnage.

THE ENTIRE HEBREW BIBLE WAS PRINTED IN 1488.

The labor market in Sydney, recently so depressed, is improving.

Oliver Wendell Holmes does not mind what cranks say about him, so long as they do not steal his poems.

Coughing may be stopped by pressing on the nerves of the lips in the neighborhood of the nose. A pressure there may prevent a cough when it is beginning. Pressing very hard on the top of the mouth inside is also a means of stopping coughing. And the will has immense power, too.

That nobility is the truest which a man derives, not from his pedigree, but from himself; that excellency is the greatest which is personal; that glory is the most estimable which is fixed in "our intellectual and moral attributes; not that which a man locks up with his cash, or puts by with his ribbons.

To cure corns.—Get a lump of chalk, beat and pound until it is as fine and soft as flour; then obtain a common tallow candle, mix the chalk and tallow into a fine, smooth paste. This simple plebeian remedy, if faithfully followed, seldom fails. Rub into the corns night and morning and at any time when you have the opportunity, until they drop or disappear altogether.

REMOVING CONFEDERATE DISABILITIES.

Washington, Dec. 7.—Congressman Herbert, of Alabama, introduced a bill to remove the disabilities of ex-Confederates, and to make them eligible for appointment into the United States Army and Navy. In conversation with a reporter to-day the Congressman said that the bill was the outgrowth of the Cutting affair.

My people down there," he said, "large numbers of them, in fact, were so much incensed over the Cutting episode that they volunteered to organize troops to invade Mexico if necessary. A large proportion of them found they could not enlist under their country's flag, as they had formerly served the Confederacy. Their complaints to me suggested the idea of this bill. Now, in case of war with a foreign Power, the Government would be very glad to avail herself of all the ex-Confederates. Their experience would be of great benefit, for they would add trained officers to both army and navy. To pass this bill after a war had been declared would be a necessity, and would then be considered by the South as an act of expediency. If, on the contrary, the bill should become a law in time of peace, it would be accepted as a gracious act, well-worthy of a forgiving nation and would, I believe, go far toward healing the still rankling sores and animosities that lie hidden by force of human nature in the heart of many a Southerner." —[Special to Louisville Courier-Journal.

PROFANITY EFFECTUALLY REBUKED.

Kilpatrick, when a Lieutenant Colonel of cavalry, met a deserved rebuke for his profanity. Coster was with him when he rode up to a sergeant of the guard in his regiment and, swearing at him furiously, ordered him to attend to a certain matter that had been neglected. The man folded his arms and stood at bay, looking Kilpatrick squarely in the eye. "Do you hear me, you!" said the latter, "why don't you do as I tell you?" "When I receive a proper order I shall obey," said the soldier firmly. "The Articles of War forbid you to address me in the language you have used." Coster "snickered right out in meeting," and said in a stage whisper: "By— he's got you, Kil." Colonel Kilpatrick saw the point at once, and in a very many way changed his front and apologized. "Sergeant," said he, "you are right and I apologize. I should not have addressed you as I did."

A NEW CRAZE.

New York, Dec. 20.—The Tribune says: Boar hunting is a great sport in Germany, and it may become a tremendous "craze" in this country for rich people before the last decade of the century has begun. At any rate, some hunters in and near New York have been talking about the matter, and an effort will probably soon be made to scatter boars through some park like Tuxedo or a preserve in the West, let them propagate, and then have each fall and winter a hunt which shall be speeded with more danger than the chase of Long Island fox or the pursuit of the mild-eyed deer. Reiche & Bro., animal importers, have been in correspondence with several gentlemen, and determined some time ago to import a number of wild boars from Germany as an experiment. The first consignment arrived yesterday on the North German Lloyd steamer Werra, from Bremen. To-day a dozen boars will be taken to Hoboken, and from there to the grounds of the first sportsmen who come to get them.
